Randy Waits is a Louisiana Maritime Trial Attorney with 40 years of experience. Randy has tried hundreds of maritime and admiralty cases including the areas of seaman's claims, maritime personal injury, general maritime law, limitations of liability, occupational disease and exposure, mass tort including silica exposure, vessel collisions and allision, insurance coverage disputes, contractual indemnity disputes and assorted damage claims arising from maritime casualties.

Randy began his professional career as a marine claims adjustor for a domestic underwriter. Randy continued to work as an adjuster and as an assistant insurance manager for a domestic vessel operator with over 100 vessels operating around the world. Randy's working career made him realize that in order to get the best results in civil litigation, an adjustor/attorney must be ready, willing and able to proceed to trial. Randy understands that to achieve prompt and reasonable resolution of disputes requires that your opponent understand that your legal/claims team is ready, willing and able to proceed to trial to achieve fair resolution of a civil matter.

Randy attended public schools in the State of Louisiana graduating from Louisiana State University in 1973 with a B.S. in Finance. Interested in marine transportation and insurance he began his professional career as a regional marine claims adjustor. Randy attended Loyola University Law School at night as he continued his full time working career during the day. Randy's early professional career was thus spent as a consumer of legal service - not a provider.

As an attorney Randy sought employment with Francis Emmett, a recognized admiralty litigator and joined Mr. Emmett in 1978. He soon found himself in court defending serious Jones Act cases to verdict and accomplished his first goal as a lawyer - developing the respect of the court and the bar as an aggressive and competent trial lawyer.

After 40 years of practice and many successful trials he has accomplished his
