Former Judge Ken Tapscott has over 25 years of experience in civil litigation, including the 12 years he presided over Dallas County Court at Law #4, a court of unlimited monetary jurisdiction in Dallas County, Texas. In his time as a judge, he delivered nearly 430 civil lawsuits to jury verdict and adjudicated over 2,500 non-jury cases covering commercial litigation, product liability, premises liability, casualty, and real estate.

His career in private practice has focused on both the prosecution and defense of product liability cases or general liability claims related to premises liability or casualty. Ken joined Thompson Coe in 2019 and has been aggressively defending companies and individuals in product liability, premises liability, and casualty since joining the firm.

Experienced and knowledgeable from his time working as a litigator and judge in civil litigation, he values close relationships with his clients and their representatives to give them the results they desire and deserve. He believes hard work in representation of client interests should be expected by all his clients, and he continuously strives to get the best end-result possible under case circumstances.
