Chris Roach focuses his practice on general liability and catastrophic injury bringing detail-oriented preparation to every case that comes across his desk. He handles cases every step of the way from pre-suit through trial, taking pride in obtaining the most favorable results for his clients.

Chris comes from a line of lawyers beginning with his grandfather who started practicing Oil and Gas law here in Dallas in the 1950s. Chris considers being a lawyer a significant part of who he is and takes pride in working hard not only for his name but his family's as well.

Background

Chris spent the first period of his licensure practicing Criminal Defense Law where he was able to gain valuable courtroom experience. Representing clients against the state of Texas prepared him to stand in front of a judge and jury and advocate zealously for his client without having the odds in his favor.
