Hope Miranda focuses her practice on personal injury litigation, including premises liability cases, maritime cases, automobile accidents, Dram shop claims, on-premises assaults, and oil and gas cases. She also represents small businesses in a broad range of contractual and commercial disputes. However, Hope has litigated on behalf of clients in personal injury, nonsubscriber, medical malpractice, subrogation, and investment fraud matters in over 10 states nationwide.

With her vast and versatile experience in both plaintiff and defense cases, Hope brings a unique perspective to each case, anticipating the arguments and strategies of opposing counsel and accurately calculating their expectations. Having also obtained an MBA, her versatile skillset allows her to understand complex legal and regulatory issues and assist in implementing an effective and strategic solution.

Hope strives to set realistic expectations for her clients fighting cases that warrant it without incurring unnecessary fees and expenses on those that are better suited for an alternative resolution strategy.

Background

Prior to beginning defense work, Hope spent four years working at a boutique Plaintiff's firm. There, she focused primarily on representing small to mid-sized business owners who had been defrauded as a result of elaborate investment schemes predicated on the purported tax-deductibility of contributions made to various employer welfare benefit plans, marketed as valid and IRS- approved under IRC §419A(f)(6), IRC §419e, IRC §412i, IRC §79 and IRC §83. Hope's vast and versatile experience on both sides of the aisle provide her with an exceptional ability to anticipate the arguments and strategy of the opposing party as well as accurately calculate the party's expectations. It also allows Hope to set realistic expectations for her clients, fighting the cases that warrant it without expending unnecessary fees and expenses on those cases that are better suited for an alternative resolution strategy.

Representative Experience

Successfully obtained summary judgments in several breach of contract and premises liability cases

Assisted in successfully appealing the dismissal of her client's fraud claims in an Indiana case

Handled all aspects of litigation up until trial in an investment fraud case in which her client was awarded over $1.5 million in damages by a Texas jury
