Mark Kressenberg is a veteran first party trial lawyer with a solid background in both commercial and personal lines property and casualty litigation. He regularly represents domestic and surplus line carriers in a wide variety of bad faith claims in both state and federal court, bringing his substantial experience to achieve consistently favorable results for his clients.

Mark's philosophy is that it is the carrier's claim and the carrier's money and that effective representation inherently entails appropriately litigating the matter's size and complexity. Focused discovery, early exploration of settlement potential, and judicious use of motion practice are the key elements of his practice style.

Personal service and professional excellence are the foundation upon which Mark's insurance law practice is built.

He has represented clients in multi-million dollar commercial catastrophe claims as well as residential wind and hail claims. Tailoring the level of litigation to the size and complexity of the matter, he consistently achieves favorable results for his clients in a cost-conscious manner.

He has successfully managed large catastrophe dockets in Hurricanes Ike and Harvey and numerous Texas hailstorm events for commercial and personal lines disputes. Mark is well-respected by both sides of the insurance law bar for his professionalism and knowledge.
