Jasmine Isokpunwu is an innovative commercial litigator specializing in business and regulatory matters in capital markets. She has experience with investment management matters for private equity firms, investment managers, and high-net-worth clients.

This includes the formation of financial vehicles, limited partnership and partnership agreements, as well as Security Exchange Commission compliance handling.

Before joining Thompson Coe, Jasmine worked at a top AML law firm primarily as an investment management attorney in a niche group that solely represented one of the biggest investment management companies in the world.

Her background provides the requisite experience to think outside the box and handle the unique business needs of her clients throughout the litigation process.
