Jeffrey Fultz focuses his practice on cases involving personal injury, products liability, mass tort, first-party claims and litigation, and a variety of complex civil and commercial litigation.

Jeffrey represents commercial, property & casualty, oil & gas, and personal lines/commercial auto insurers and their insureds, providing investigative services, pre-litigation claims resolution, and zealous representation of his clients in all stages of civil litigation through trial.

His top priority is a commitment to providing personal attention to his clients and their cases, whether a large business/corporation or an individual.

Background

Jeffrey Fultz, a native Texan, was raised in Navasota, a small town in southeast Texas. He comes from a family of country lawyers that embody grit, determination and service above self, and is engrained with a tough work ethic and non-elitist, yet confident personality, understanding that the practice of law is a service industry in which a lawyer must be able to identify and relate to all types of individuals, clients, and adversaries.

He is known for his tenacity in vigorously defending his clients and “getting the job done” efficiently with honesty, integrity, and compassion.

Civil Litigation

Jeffrey has handled a broad range of civil matters including cases and claims related to exposure to silica, asbestos, benzene and other toxic/environmental hazards; premises liability; construction defects; products liability; and catastrophic injury/wrongful death cases.

Insurance Coverage Litigation

Jeffrey has developed a strong practice in handling first-party insurance claims, bad faith and other insurance coverage litigation as well as extensive experience litigating cases involving commercial trucking accidents, automobile accidents, and cases involving catastrophic injury, property damage, cargo damage, and subrogation matters.
