Keely Taylor brings significant courtroom experience to her practice from her prior service as a prosecutor, where she first-chaired jury trials and managed high-volume criminal dockets from arraignment through verdict.

She also draws on her law school internship experiences with Title IX offices and the United States Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, providing her with a comprehensive understanding of how cases are reported, investigated, evaluated, and defended. Her experience allows her to quickly synthesize complex facts, anticipate challenges, and develop efficient, outcome-focused litigation strategies for her clients.
